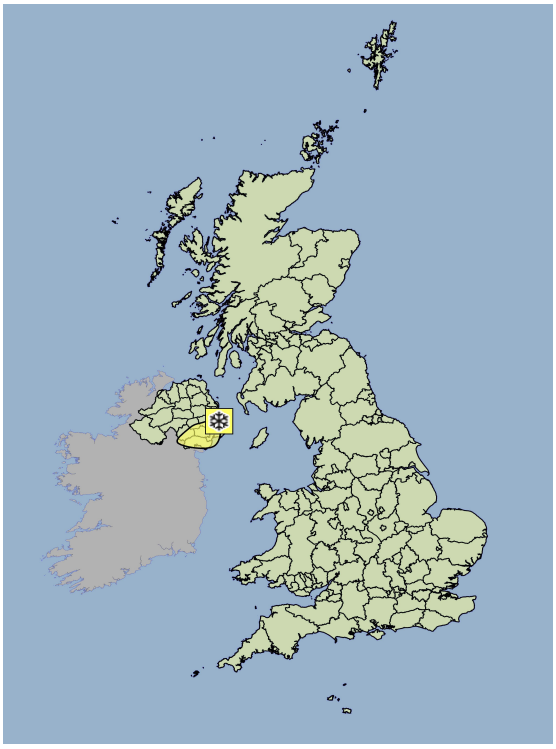
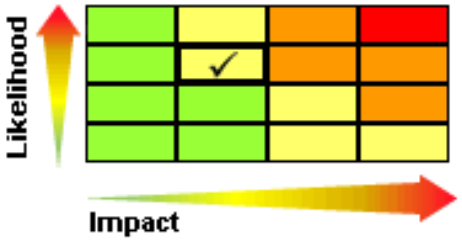
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A very cold easterly airstream is continuing to bring snow showers to southeastern parts of Northern Ireland. Further, mainly slight, accumulations of snow are also likely overnight as temperatures dip below freezing once again as well as icy patches.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow

Valid from 09:00 on Tue, 26th Mar 2013 until 09:00 on Wed, 27th Mar 2013

Snow showers will continue to affect southeastern parts of Northern Ireland on Tuesday, Tuesday night and into Wednesday morning. 1-2 cm may accumulate in places, with up to 5 cm in hilly areas. By day any accumulations on roads will be temporary but are more likely to persist from mid evening until mid morning. In addition, icy patches may affect some surfaces overnight where snow has melted by day.

Drivers are advised to take extra care and be aware of the risk of some disruption to travel.
